GHOST-PIGS IN THE SKY!

But Jake was a gunfighter.
He was big and tough and mean
He never bothered shaving
And his pants were never clean.

He fought! and stole and gambled,
And treated people bad.
And no-one dared to stop him!
Oh, what an utter cad!

One day while Jake was riding,
An Indian called him out.
And said, 'You are a bad man, Jake,
'Is really is a shame!'

He said, 'You cheat and gamble, Jake,
And you don't give a fig.
'But beware that you aren't haunted
'By the devil's band of pigs!'

Tippee-ti-yap! Tippee-ti-yoh!
The devil's band of pigs!

But Jake just started and laughed
And knocked the Indian to the floor,
For Jake thought he was big and tough
And 'way above the law.

But that night he had a nightmare,
And in his sleep he cried –
He dreamed about the devil's band
The ghost-pigs in the sky!

Tippee-ti-yap! Tippee-ti-yoh!
The ghost-pigs in the sky!

Next morning Jake forgot his dream
And rode into a town –
He planned to rob the local bank
And burn the schoolhouse down –

But all at once, a man in black Appeared down the street,
And called on Jake to draw his gun!
There was nowhere to retreat!

Now, Jake he wasn't worried,
For he thought he was the best,
He'd never lost a gunfight,
He was the fastest in the West,

But as his horseman raised his head,
Jake gave a little shout,
For the man looked like a devil-pig,
With an eerie piggy snout!

This sight made Bad Jake hesitate,
His draw was a far too slow,
In seconds he had met his fate,
Shot by his evil foe!

As Jake lay in the dusty street,
His life blood oozed away,
'The haunted pigs have got me,'
Were the last words he did say

And as Jake breathed his dying breaths,
His foe removed his snout,
And moved to a nearby building
And the Indian came out!

They'd plotted in advance to make Jake make his fatal error,
And played upon his fear of ghosts
To end his reign of terror!

Because Jake was afraid of pigs,
His horse had to fly -
He was beaten by a false snout -
And the ghost-pigs in the sky!

Tippec-a-poo! Tippec-a-poo!
Ghost-pigs in the sky!

A young Person's Guide to the Orchestra

by Harrison Vile (Aged 8 1/2)

As I am a composer,
I composed an interlocking musical staff,
and "Ode to a Dead Donk". I got an orchestra together with the following instruments:

The Sax... makes a loud "popping"
sound, but louder
or isn't smaller.
Coby Nelson likes playing this instrument, as he can fill it with sonnets and such like
he must be blowing

The Backbender sounds like a cat being strong winded, especially when Helen Jones plays it.
Backbenders often smell of antiseptic. "Tom" teachers use them in it to stop you getting dreadful diseases. So you get antiseptic but poisoning instead, but they won't let you have a days off school for that.

The Gitter this instrument has lovely beautiful sounds but what was wrong
Helen is playing it beforehand, see if the noise and with a gitter so I had to let him in the orchestra.

I had Jackie Cameron playing washboard, and Jim Pansy on the tubs. I was the conductor (boos)
